HEADLINES

- This is the first meeting between these two clubs, but there is a little bit of familiarity at least; head coach Dom Casciato was an assistant coach at NM's rivals in El Paso for a couple years before taking the gaffer's gig in Omaha.

- It's been a tale of two seasons so far for the Owls, as they're only 1-2-0 in the league (with, as is often the case, fewer games played than anyone else). They've rattled off three wins in the U.S. Open Cup, though, including a "cupset" of San Antonio FC just over a week ago.

- The workrate of wingbacks Charlie Ostrem and Dion Acoff will be paramount to success for Union Omaha. They'll need to be disciplined defensively against a dangerous United side, but Ostrem has a pair of assists in the league, while Acoff has a pair of goals in all competitions (including the winning goal against San Antonio).

- It'll be a reunion for one notable player in this match: New Mexico forward Greg Hurst played an integral role in the Owls' first USL1 title in 2021, and is still firing now with 3 goals on the young season for New Mexico.

- For a Union Omaha squad who's looking likely to rely on a variety of sources for goals this season, they'll need at least one of those to step up in a big way. New Mexico has four straight 1-0 victories in league play, albeit broken up by the 2-2 result against El Paso in the Open Cup that they lost on PKs.

ABSENCES

- Lagos Kunga (leg)
- Blake Malone (foot)
